The Malayalam film Bangalore Days (2015) released by the time this movie was started, many of those films had become sort of a standard thing which people can identify them by. That movie had the advantage of the fact that it was directed by and starred both the lead actors, but that the biggest reason why it was so successful, it the fact that it had only one name in it and that name was Jiiva. All of the people were waiting for his next movie to come out and I think it was a long time, I think up to the time he was in his last movie, I think it was ten years. They were all very eager to see Jiiva onscreen doing new and different things. And that is always a good thing to try to do and that's what this movie Bangalore Days (2015) was. So that is a long time between pictures for everyone, but this time around they managed to get the work done pretty fast. Director Bommarillu Bhaskar decided that he was going to try out to do a movie about Bangalore and a movie about a family of all the people living in a city, everybody living in the same house and you are all feeling it. And I think it worked out for the best. So it is a movie where they explore the fact that even though we all get up in the morning and we go to work and we have all kinds of different responsibilities and jobs and lives and everything like that, when we come home we are still all very much the same. We all come home and we are still very much like children at one point, we all feel the same way, we all feel like we have been treated unfairly and this movie Bangalore Days (2015) was able to deal with all those various different things in our lives and make us think about some of those things. And so when I look at the pictures of the movie, the first one I will mention is of the dog that was going to be thrown out. And everybody was crying and everybody was asking
