A: As I'd expect, your connection is probably failing because you have a very short timeout, and it's so short that the socket(2) system call doesn't return the "exception" status. If you debug, you should see a call to select(2) with "selecting for write" or "selecting for read" (I have no experience with this, so I don't know which one) and a call to write(2). The corresponding read(2) should work fine because the socket is already connected, but you should probably also get a result indicating that the read(2) has been attempted. You're not seeing this, because the socket is full of 0 bytes. You have a full-duplex connection, so you're supposed to be able to read and write at the same time.

Alan Bradshaw Alan Bradshaw (born 1940) is a British former racing driver. He raced in the British Formula One Championship and the European Formula Two Championship in 1963, and won the 1963 London Trophy Formula Ford race. He was also a highly successful racing motorcycle and sports car driver. Bradshaw was born in Worsborough, Yorkshire, and was educated at Chetwynd Grammar School and the University of Nottingham, where he was awarded a first class degree. He joined the staff of Shell, working at Esso, and in 1962 became the senior test driver for its Formula One team, Wolf. Bradshaw stayed with the team until 1968, when he joined the Bodensee Grand Prix team. In 1968 he drove a BMW M1 in the British and German Porsche Carrera Cup. Competing in the series, his best result was fourth place in the German round at the Nürburgring, where he started from fourth position. He won the Race of the Year at the British Rally Championship with Tom Sims. In 1969 and 1970 he drove a Porsche 935 in the European Touring Car Championship and the US-based Sports Car Club of America's Trans Am Series. In 1969 and 1970 he also drove a Porsche 907 and 908, both under the Voigtländer license.
