Give it a try!It is known in the art to employ package trays in the form of light-redistributing or diffusing film for molding articles and, in particular, for deep-drawing molded sheets such as, for example, light diffusers and light diffusing panels. Particularly, a thin, transparent film of polyester having an intrinsic color is disclosed as being transparent and spreadable on a container for various articles, such as food, beverages, cosmetics, pharmaceuticals, perfumes, etc., to protect or diffuse light incident to said container. Said film is either heat-sealed with a transparent film laminate of polystyrene or protected by a flexible film wrapper such as, for example, a polypropylene film by means of heat sealing. For example, U.S. Pat. No. 3,981,746 discloses the use of a transparent polyester film to protect a fluid, such as a beverage, a perfume, or a cosmetic, contained in a transparent container. Said polyester film of transparent polyester is subjected to a high-speed extrusion process to form a continuous strip extending in the direction of the film width. The strip is cut to a predetermined length to form a film which is sealed, by means of heat sealing, on one side of the container. A second film is heat-sealed with the first film opposite the container and the second film is cut to a length shorter than that of the first film. The thus-formed hollow sandwich-shaped package is a light-redistributing film suitable for use as a tray. The hollow shape is desired to reduce the weight of the package without reducing the ability of said package to light-redistribute. U.S. Pat.
