Gamers in an unfortunate convergence of events are stuck behind bars for the crime of playing video games. The prisoners do not understand how they ended up behind bars, or why the footage of their games is being shown in court. They question the judiciary's belief system as to the nefariousness of the game or what powers they had access to in a game, and are confused when their fellow prisoner next to them has played it for years as a past time. The police have new ways to detect players, mobile phones in prison towers tracking all who play and keep meticulous records on who plays what game. This is a new world that players must understand and survive in. G
