It started...with a dragon. Minimi was rescued from a distant land, then found her way back to Nyalra's village, only to disappear one day. Legend has it that her sister was taken as well. Now Nyalra and Minimi must find this mysterious girl and save her from whatever fate awaits her on this fantastical world. Conquering monstrous bosses, dodging colossal projectiles and hellfire, and leveling up with two different abilities are all a part of the Diadra Empty experience. Each of its six different, open-air arenas offers plenty of ground to cover, creating the ultimate RPG-shoot-'em-up. The game also features a characteristic upgrade system, where you can increase the effectiveness and range of your weaponry with and without the dragon!

Look for Diadra Empty at: You like the RPG genre but you're looking for a game that combines those elements with some classic shoot 'em up action. Then check out the PC/Mac demake of the classic game Gradius. Demakes are games that take the basic gameplay of a certain game and they are made in the style of another game, or a genre. A demake is usually a mod for a video game. The player gets to play through the game in the way he/she would normally play the game, but the graphics, sounds, music, and everything else from the original game is recreated using the available assets (if the game had a story). A demake is different from a conversion because the player can see the graphics on his/her screen like the original game. A demake, however, is still made using the assets of a previous game. The predecessor to the demake of Gradius is a game called Another World. This game was later on called Another World: The Demake. The game was made in the style of Gradius using the code of Another World as the basis. The game is exactly like the original with a few exceptions. The game is based on the 8-bit release. It has improved graphics (textures are a bit different in places) but, for the most part, is identical to the original. The music is also carried over to the new game (it's the music of Gradius for the most part). Also, the new game has sound effects instead of the chimes from the original. The ability to change the length of the levels (player has infinite lives) and have weapons respawn are two new features. Other than the game itself, there are also some things

Changing your weight is crucial to win any fight. When you are fighting, you will not be able to use weapons, only a defenseless punch as possible. When your weight is under 90kg, you can use punch, kick, tackle, and throw. When your weight is between 90kg to 110kg, you can use only kick, and above 110kg, you are good to go! Some weapons are not equipped with your weight class. These weapons will not work with you! Controls: Player 1: Accelerate with buttons 1 & 2 Player 2: Control with the right stick Make movement with the left stick Player 1, 2: Punch: X Kick: Y Throw: B Weapon: A Spin: D-Pad Tackle: Arrow Control the ship with the left stick Use keys to turn on the radio IMPORTANT! The game is very easy to play, but extremely hard to win! The invisible player can also help you. You can upgrade your weight class by buying new equipment and training. If you are a beginner, the weight class upgrade is easy for you. If you already have a high skill, the weight class upgrade will take longer time and is harder. Years ago, when we first started a website called uvoku.com (which is still up, and is still a great place to go to help people with their web development), we decided to put together a post about best practices in web development. These best practices are no longer important, but we were only beginning to learn the lessons of the Internet so that's all right. Today, when we update our uvoku.com website, we stop by there to check the link stats, and see where visitors come from. This morning we had around 600 visitors from Tumblr, and 4,500 from WordPress.com. While we like WordPress.com, I don't really like that our visitors were coming from there, simply because it took me more time than it should to "activate" our new hosting at WordPress.com. When I first started uvoku.com (it's still there, it's still awesome) there was no "behind the scenes" of anything. In fact, like a lot of startups, our website was the first thing our founders put online. Why? Because there wasn't any other way to get people interested

What's new:

"Spy Tactics" is a one-off feature-length television episode of The CW television series Supernatural. It was the twelfth episode of the fifteenth season and was first broadcast on December 22, 2017. It aired on The CW after the season premiere of The Flash, and was followed by the season finale of Supergirl and a movie, Justice League Action, which had its television premiere the next night and included the episode. It was directed by Larry Teng and written by the show's executive producers Robert Berens and Andrew Dabb. It introduces a new recurring character, a teacher and mentor to both Dean and Cas, named Alden. The episode is also a loose follow-up to The Shield of Samson, which had aired earlier in the season. The episode first aired in the United States on The CW on December 22, 2017. It received mainly positive reviews from critics, who had numerous criticisms of the episode including the character consistency, plot resolution and the final scene, which was widely compared to that of the 1950 film Broken Arrow, a dissociative identity disorder film. Upon airing, it was watched by 1.8 million viewers and was the highest rated television program that day. It tied with "Hallway Haunting" from the "From Earshot to Eternity" crossover, which had aired the day before. Upon its run on The CW, the episode was distributed for free to internet viewers through CW Seed, while the Supernatural channel also broadcast the episode for an hour a day prior to the season premiere of The Flash. The latter airing was ranked as CW's highest-rated program for the day by Pure Chart. A VOD version of the episode was released online after the season premiere of The Flash, and also made available on CW Seed. Plot In L.A., Sam is on a rooftop after dark and he is tormented by an unknown presence.

He is forced to leave the rooftop before an attack takes place. Dean arrives and tries to help his friend. They decide to head to the airport to search for human traffickers, as in their line of work at the moment, they primarily capture humans. They arrive at the airport and Sam leaves a message for Castiel to meet them there. They are soon caught by the airport workers and brought before the Air Marshal. The marshal insults Cas and is about to kill them when Sam steps in. He is able to get the Air Marshal to let them out and Cas' distress call gets through. Sam and Dean head
