The Hunted will be a free to play VR game available to play on Steam. Credits: All the Team: Steve, who has a background in games since the 90s. Matthew who is a full time R&D and can take care of the business side. Jake: amazing concept art Ian who has a lot of great experience but maybe was part of the old days. Luke was the game designer and has done an amazing job transforming ideas and concepts into a game. Xander has turned his background in animation and creative technology into being a technical lead and our full time coder. Travis is our lead animator and has an amazing ability to cut through all the mucky stuff and get to the heart of things. Brian has had a massive job with UI and graphics, we think he may have actually made the game now! Heather has done an amazing job with our audio including the sound effects. Steve who has had to work really hard to Dega Madness is a Chinese card game where players use balls to beat out other players and win by eliminating them. It is popular in southern China and Taiwan due to the historical value of the hollow tile. In this article, the players compare the problems that they face for competing with each other (jiao jie, □□) and a strategy that they may use to make the game a bit more interesting (liuju, □□). Background In the martial arts fable of "Li Kui's Kiss", a general named Li Kui found that some common herbs and plants could be used as lethal killing weapons. Li Kui constantly experimented on them, by blowing various herbs into the air, placing them on pieces of rubber attached to the shaft of a wooden cat and shooting them with crude weapons he found in a city at the time, all the while observing how people reacted to these new forces. Li Kui eventually managed to kill anyone near him with one of these new weapons, which he ordered to be called 'Kui Cunshuzi'. Gang of Nine: Yuanyangli and Xinjingli The first recorded player to win Dega Madness in China was Chu Shanliang (□□□, a.k.a. the Yuanyangli, also known in English as the Guanli, □□, a.k.a. the Guanyangli), a Gang of Nine (xiuxuan) (□□), and disciple of the renowned Jin Yuexian (□□□), a famous qi gong master and martial artist, who created the game. In the legend, Chu Shanliang went on to compete in a contest against seven other experts from near and far, and defeated them all to become an immortal Martial Artist. This legend is the source of the term 'dekada' (重大), as deka (重) means 'heavy' and da (大) means 'immortal'. The second recorded player to win Dega was the Xinjingli Xinji, also a Gang of Nine (xiuxuan). This player was nicknamed the 'Three-Sword Hero', because his skills were so refined that he could perform three repetitive sword techniques on three swords simultaneously - all while in the air,

"The game is loosely inspired by the legends surrounding the missing child known as the Bride of Baskerville. The legend goes that the town of Baskerville is cursed, and after it's residents were murdered, a local young couple took up their torches and joined forces with the evil spirits of the town. Together they took up residence in the demonic Baskerville Hall, where the bride remains even to this day, sleeping alone in a glass coffin. Now the town has become a tourist magnet, selling ghost hunting tours, and her presence has been widely noted." What can be said about this really good second wave of 2D platformer? It's just so brilliant. If you're not a fan of 90% of the current HD platformers out there (or if you've actually played a classic 2D platformer lately), please don't play this game. It's not for you. It's a reminder of what good gameplay looks like. For all you folks out there who have played classics like Super Mario World or Banjo-Kazooie, this is a must-play. It's so good. "But can it stand the test of time?" you ask. Like so many things in life, the answer to that question is yes. In fact, the game is as fresh and well-made now as it was when it came out (and likely even better). In fact, Mirror-made games have rarely done anything but "improve" as time goes on. The reason why this is such a perfect, rare example of a time-travel platformer from the old school is that it has the depth of platformer experience — but without the foolishness of some of the platformer's most annoying aspects. Instead of complete, idiot-proof tutorials, the game employs a very clever and fun "hidden" system to teach you how to play. You don't get stuck, but you're also not suddenly given the answer to everything. Instead, the game takes you on an adventure full of puzzles that keep you on your toes. The puzzles are actually clever and strategic, rather than mindless. This is a polished gem, and I don't know if I can say that of any Mirror-made title before this. And the game's world design is even more impressive. The game is set in a rural area
